

AT&T MiFi

Friday, 28 September 2012

MiFis have been on the spotlight for the past couple of months already. In fact, ever since telcos started to introduce their ultra-high speed LTE networks, MiFi has cropped up too &ndash; in which it boasts ultra-portability to network users on the go. Well, it looks like AT&T has just recently showcased their spanking new MiFi device, which highlights a nifty 2.8-inch touchscreen screen that allows you to configure the device conveniently.

Generally, the AT&T MiFi would allow you to connect to their LTE network. The device enables you to connect up to 10 WiFi devices too. Also, the MiFi is a battery-equipped device that would allow you up to 11 hours of none-stop usage. There&rsquo;s also a microSD slot, and DLNA capabilities. AT&T further disclosed that the MiFi will be available in the upcoming months &ndash; so I&rsquo;m guessing it will be out before Christmas this year!

{mosgoogle}