

Samsung Gear VR

Wednesday, 09 July 2014

With falling sales for their smartphones division, it looks like Samsung is all set to diversify their modus operandi, in which the company is presently looking at the virtual reality headgear set, which the company announced earlier. Dubbed as the Samsung Gear VR, the respective headgear can be worn around the head, and it looks like a big pair of dorky goggles too.

Generally, the Samsung Gear VR works together with your Samsung smartphone, in which you can plug in via the USB slot, and the VR headset would function as your screen. According to Samsung, the hardware is built by Samsung, while the software is solely provided by Oculus VR, in which the company was involved in the incredibly impressive Oculus Rift project. The Samsung Gear VR will be showcased at IFA 2014 latest this year too.
